

Valuable Gifts To Be Given Away At Cooking School

EXCEPTIONALLY VALUABLE GIFTS TO BE PRESENTED TO WOMEN OF SECTION DURING COOKING SCHOOL NEXT WEEK

Generous Co-operation On the Part of Local and National Advertisers in Effort to Bring DeBoth Cooking School to Bristol — Every Woman Will Find It to Her Advantage to Attend All Four Sessions

The big news of the Courier's Cooking and Home Makers' School broke today when it was announced that in addition to the excellent programs of instruction, entertainment and general interest which are to be given each evening by the renowned lecturer-demonstrator, Miss Grace Burroughs, of the DeBoth Home Makers' School, there are to be given away absolutely free an array of exceptionally valuable gifts. These will be in addition to the 25 market bags to be presented to 25 women each evening during the four days' sessions.

This exceptionally generous distribution of gifts is made possible through the 100 per cent cooperation on the part of the local and national advertisers joining hands with the Courier in the effort to bring to Bristol the DeBoth Cooking and Home Makers' School.

There is not to be one cent of admission charged to the school. No individual attending will have to make any purchases. There will be no assessments and the Courier assures the women of lower Bucks County that the distribution of the bags filled with provisions and the giving away of a large number of gifts will not cost the recipients one cent.

The market bags will be filled with staple articles which will be useful in any household.

A number of the participating merchants are arranging a truck parade through Bristol and the adjoining towns advertising the school. This parade is being scheduled for Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. It will be headed by the music wagon of the General Baking Company, makers of Bond Bread. The parade is to form at Otter and Bath streets.

Mrs. Alvin T. Lippincott, of Cornwells Heights, will act as hostess at the Courier's cooking school on Thursday night.

"Who is the boss in my kitchen—my wife or her can opener?"

More than one man has asked himself that question after the first rose-scented dawn of the honeymoon began to fade.

"John will be here in ten minutes, I guess I better have supper ready," remarks the can opener, as she struggles up out of the easy chair and lays aside the best seller. Poor John, he eats that ten minute meal, being hungry, and sits down to his evening paper with a sigh for the good old days and a firmer belief in things "like Mother used to make."

Miss Grace Burroughs of the DeBoth Home Makers' Schools who will open her course of lectures and demonstrations in Bristol under the auspices of the Courier on Tuesday evening is a champion can opener wielder, but her success lies in controlling the can opener rather than letting the can opener control her. She holds that the can opener has a very important place in the home; not only in providing emergency meals and garnishments, but also in making real economies and in providing a wider range and variety than our tables would otherwise know.

The phrase "A home-cooked meal" means a wonderful lot to those unfortunate, traveling men, actors, bachelors, hotel residents. They have been eating "mass production" foods so long, that a home-cooked meal is ambrosia even if it isn't very well cooked. There must be a difference or that phrase "a home-cooked meal" wouldn't hold the significance it does.

The old belief used to be that a home-cooked meal came either fresh from the fruit and vegetable stalls or from the rows and rows of glass jars on the cellar shelves. "We have made a study of the subject in the test kitchen of the DeBoth schools," says Miss Burroughs. "We know now that commercial canners can buy fresher fruits and vegetables than the average housewife, and can buy them cheaper, too. He can bring them into his plant at just the right stage of ripeness, and has at his disposal the most modern sanitary equipment that it is possible to imagine. Only the unusual housewife, possessed of her own garden, of rare skill and the best equipment money can buy, may hope to do as well. Wisely she decided that in many cases she can profit through buying fruits and vegetables that are commercially canned. Her problem lies in knowing how and where to buy them, how to combine them with the rest of her meal. Then and only then will her meals have the wholesomeness, the tastiness and the individuality we have come to associate with home-cooked meals.

"But," says Miss Burroughs, "we must not forget that sometimes our memories play queer tricks when it comes to recalling our childhood days. The big yard in which we used to play shrinks strangely in size when we view it now, and the building that impressed us with its size and magnificence has grown to modest proportions. In the same way, our early recollections of the old-time pies, biscuits and pan-cakes grow greater with time. And when we add to that recollection the fine spice of a child's vigorous appetite, it is not surprising that the modern cook has a big superstition to live down and a real goal to aim at."

"A good many domestic difficulties end in the courts but they originated in the kitchen," adds Miss Burroughs in emphasizing the importance of keeping up the level of the "home-cooked meal." Her contention is not based on guesswork. The DeBoth Home Makers' School has spent years in research of every sort and domestic smash-ups come in for investigation along with food values, costs and other vital household problems.

Dyspepsia can cloud the brightest love, sour the sweetest disposition and the loving husband who turns into an old grouch is more apt to have the seat of his troubles in his stomach than in his heart. Many a woman has tried her way to a divorce court. Another thing Miss Burroughs points out in this connection is that it isn't always careless or lazy kitchen activities that bring about this condition. It often lies in the fact that the cook doesn't know or understand food values, and feeds her family not wisely but too well.

Those who attend Miss Burroughs' lectures and demonstrations have impressed upon them the value of balanced rations. That doesn't mean a reducing tad, a denial of this food or that, cutting out starch or sugars or proteins—it means the right combinations of them. It means giving Nature a chance. There is an endless variety of foods, she points out, and that variety allows delicious meals that will appeal to anyone and yet be made up of a combination that allows sleep, rest, good disposition, muscle building and freedom from the ill health that follows food abuse.

"Most of the remarks about 'I love so and so but I just can't eat it,' are based on the fact that the troublesome food was put into a wrong combination," she says. "When the cook knows food value, she is on her way to preparing almost anything so almost anyone can eat and enjoy it. It doesn't require great medical knowledge. Nature's rules are few and simple."

Too many shouts of "My, that looks wonderful," have been followed by a dreary aftermath of "Oh, I wish I hadn't eaten it." Know your kitchen laws and avoid midnight groans is her belief. You can't make the family happy and sick at the same time, is another assertion. Those who hear her will be able to avoid those mistakes at least.

Sessions of the school are to be held in St. James' Parish Building, Wood and Walnut streets, at 7.45, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

WHY YOU SHOULD GO TO CHURCH

By Rev. R. H. Clark
Pastor, Edgely Union Church

In order to enjoy the helpfulness of Christian fellowship you should be identified with some group of Christian people. Don't think you can die and step right into Heaven. Oh, no, you would be out of place if you did not associate with Christian people on earth, because there will only be Christians in Heaven.

Don't come back with that old answer: "Do you call so-and-so a Christian?" Listen, the Great Judge won't ask you or me who is to be classed as a Christian, but the old tape measure will be used on all of us, and He will decide who is to be classed as a Christian.

Let's mind our own business by thinking about our own souls, where we are going to spend eternity, and just now—join church, hear the Gospel preached every Sunday, and try to live by it all week.

The church always has its membership book open. Is your name there?

MAMMOTH CAVE JAUNT COVERS 1818 MILES

Tour Affords Opportunity To Visit Birthplace of Lincoln

TO BLUEGRASS LAND

In the heart of the blue grass lands of old Kentucky is located Mammoth Cave, one of the most picturesque underground caverns in America. The Keystone Automobile Club has outlined a motor tour to this grotto region and the entire round trip can be covered in approximately 1818 miles.

"The tour also affords an opportunity to visit Hodgenville, Ky., the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, which has become one of our national shrines that annually attracts throngs of visitors," says Russell R. Cary, representative of the club.

From Bristol the tour leads over the Boulevard then over Hunting Park Avenue and City Line Avenue to Overbrook. Here a right turn into the Lincoln Highway, U. S. Route 30 carries the travelers to Gettysburg where the state highways are used through Waynesboro to Hagerstown. From this point U. S. Route 21 is followed to Winchester, Va.

Westward from Winchester the tourists follow the historic old National Turnpike, U. S. Route 50, which is typical of the early roads founded on the ancient trails of the Indian and Buffalo, the white trapper and the pioneer and which gradually developed into a modern highway. Capon Springs, a resort section in the heart of a magnificent hunting and fishing area; picturesque Ice Mountain and Hanging Rocks, near Romney are passed enroute to Red House from where side trips can be made to Mountain Lake Park and Deer Park.

Over a winding course through the Cheat Mountain section with its "Pictured Rocks" or Indian days, the highway leads through Clarksburg, birthplace of General "Stonewall" Jackson to Parkersburg. In the Ohio River, lies Blennerhassett Island, scene of Aaron Burr's scheme to establish the great southwest empire. Southward from Parkersburg, U. S. Route 21 is used to Charleston, capital city of West Virginia and a most interesting place to visit. Westward from here the tour continues over U. S. Route 60 through Huntington in the heart of a vast coal and timber center.

Crossing the Big Sandy River the travelers pass through Catlettsburg and into the delightful blue grass lands of Kentucky. Lexington, Frankfort and Louisville are some of the delightful places affording stopovers. From Louisville U. S. Route 31E is followed southward through Bardonia to Hodgenville, where stands the memorial built around the humble log cabin in which Abraham Lincoln was born. Through Bear Wallow and Horse Cave the tour continues to Cave City a central point from which to reach Mammoth Cave, the Diamond Caverns and other underground wonderlands nearby.

PERKASIE, Nov. 7.—Borough council will notify assessors to raise the assessment on all vacant lots in the borough, upon which billboards are erected, as they will be considered improved properties.

A nine months' report of the electric light plant was read at the November meeting of Council by L. A. Pritchard, chairman of the finance committee.

A gross income of $54,987.16 was realized during the nine month period from the plant, $41,411.16 of which was expended leaving the net earnings $12,676.01 for the year to October 1st. Permanent improvements and the extension of new electric lines to the amount of $8,447.74 were included in the expense account of the report. In including the improvements as a portion of the net earnings of the plant, which will be greatly increased by the changes made, the earnings amount to $20,947.75.

The plant debt was reduced from $51,509 to $39,999 during the nine-month period, and during the month of October to November, an additional $4,999 was paid off, leaving the debt $35,000 to date. JOAN LOWELL'S PRAYER FOR ACTION ANSWERED

Bucks Co. Woman is Aboard Cutter When Trawler Asks Help

THROUGH CHOPPY SEA

Eight days Joan Lowell spent with the Coast Guardsmen, and this is the fifth of a series of stories and thrills by the romantic authoress who was born aboard ship and who recounted her seafaring girlhood in the story, "Cradle of the Deep." The first woman ever permitted to be a part of the dangerous work performed by the Coast Guard, Joan Lowell received special permission from Washington for the purpose.

By Joan Lowell

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—(INS)—Wednesday morning, the third day of my cruise on the Coast Guard cutter Mojave, was misty with threatening showers, but my spirits were undampened, for rain is a break for curly hair when it tightens the little tendrils around one's forehead.

I rushed up on the bridge to see if anything ominous was about to happen, but there wasn't a mast in sight on the horizon or a betraying streak of smoke of any ship.

Fearful if I went below decks something might occur and I wouldn't be an eye witness to it, I procured a copy of the Coast Guard Manual to study from Capt. Parker, and encouraged myself in the starboard lifeboat which swung from its davits abaft the bridge, from where I could command a view of the Mojave from stem to stern.

I hadn't been nestled in my lifeboat cradle long before I was stirred from my lethargy by the ghostly shriek of the ship's siren, and the cry from the bridge, "MAN OVERBOARD."

The bell on the engine telegraph signalled stop—from all parts of the cutter men rushed to their stations—before I could run aft the lifeboat was being lowered, manned by six men and a coxswain.

The victim, a packing case, was drifting astern, just a few feet from a life buoy which had been thrown to it. With long, steady strokes the seamen pulled toward the body, and I think it was in the water a little over three minutes that they had picked up the victim and were back on board the cutter.

I have seen men at sea swept overboard—and he sucked down by currents and waves before aid could reach them—but it was obvious the coast guard kept trained to the nth degree and that their seamanship and rescue work is not just "book learning."

"There will be calls for help to-night," said Capt. Parker. "Weather like this leaves destruction in the wake of small ships and fishing craft."

At chow time, the Mojave was rolling like a stricken thing. Chairs had to be secured, port-holes bolted, everything movable lashed down.

3 POSSIBLE CAUSES FOR CRASH

Camden, N. J., Nov. 7.—Three possible causes for the fatal airplane crash which took the lives of five men at the Central Airport here Thursday were under consideration today by Federal and Camden County authorities. The real cause of the crash, however, may never be known.

Officials asserted the three possibilities advanced are: 1. The pilot of the plane became confused in the darkness and inadvertently threw the ship into a nose dive. 2. That a mechanical failure of the controls upset the plane as it was about to negotiate a landing. 3. That the plane lost landing speed and failed to pick up at a crucial moment.

The County Commissioners will present their case at a later date.

ARREST MAN WHO WAS GUARDING STOLEN CARGO

Believe He Was Implicated With Others in Stealing Tobacco

VALUED AT $13,000.00

Expected That More Arrests Will Follow Very Shortly

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Nov. 7.—More arrests are expected shortly to follow the taking into custody of one man charged with being implicated in stealing of a cargo of tobacco valued at $13,000.

The cargo of tobacco was stolen Monday night on the Lincoln Highway near here.

The man under arrest is Stanley Schultz, 32, 423 Rider street, Philadelphia. Police say he was acting as a guard over the plunder in a barn on the farm of Samuel Jacobson near Abington.

Charles Madone, of Brooklyn, driver of the truck, will face the prisoner today to see if he can identify him. Madone, who is employed by the Eastern Star Transportation, of New York, left Lancaster, with the valuable cargo of cigars. Near South Langhorne, two men in a small truck drove up to his truck and ordered him to stop.

Madone was then ordered to drive up a side road, where he was tied to a tree and a handkerchief placed over his face while the cargo was transferred to the machine of the bandits. Madone was then placed in his empty truck and driven to South Philadelphia, where he was told to remain in the machine. He later reported the case to the Philadelphia authorities and State Police of Morrisville were notified.

Police say that if Schultz is identified he will be charged with kidnapping and robbery.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"

(By "The Stroller")

A Bristol man who takes a keen interest in gunning has the following story to tell about a friend, which episode is supposed to have occurred during the rabbit season last year:

A gunner, whose dog had started a rabbit in a place which abounded in tree stumps, was astonished to find the dog chasing the rabbit around one of the clumps. As the dog was just as far away at the end of several hours' running around, he called "time."

Picking his dog up he found, to his dismay, that it was run down at its feet, so he decided to take it to a neighboring shoe-maker for repairs. When the cobbler tackled the job he could find rubber heels, but no leather. Well, they both decided that rubber could not be so bad so a set was attached to the dog, and both again went after Mr. Rabbit.

They found him resting in the one-ring circus caused by the marathon between both. Then the chase began again in earnest. Faster and faster they flew with the dog again a very tired second. The gunner noticed however that the race was so warm that the rubber heels began to melt and the poor dog began to find it harder to pull out of the tracks. If it was a tough break for the dog it was tougher for the rabbit. Well, it got so tough for both, they got stuck, but they had been going so fast their bodies began to stretch with the result that when they were finally stopped it was found that both dog and rabbit had formed a three-layer band of rubber around this tree stump and nothing could break the hold.

Now here comes the peculiar part of this remarkable race. The following spring, when dear old Dame Nature began to show the beauties of this wonderful season there grew out of that tree stump the most beautiful rubber plant that was ever seen, and, believe it or not, one half of the leaves were covered with dog hair and the other half with rabbit fur.

MALE MORE SUICIDAL

The male of the human species is more deadly than the female in the matter of self-destruction, according to a statistical bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. If you are a man you are many times more liable to end your life by your own hand than a woman is to take the same rash liberties with her own vital spark, if that is anything to cheer you up.

Between the ages of 15 and 19 female suicides are more than two and a half times as many as those among males, but beyond that age man's grudge against himself is increasingly fatal and he carries the lead to the bitter end. After the age of 65 about seven times as many men as women make the sorry finish that proves them to be cowards.

There is honor for women in these figures. They are shown to be of firmer courage at every age except the years in which they are most impressionable. No reasons for the taking of their own lives by either men or women are given but the figures give bases for guesses. One can envisage the young girl being prompted by a blasted love romance, lack of employment or shame. As she passes the dividing line between extreme youth and maturity she enters the period wherein she possibly is happily married, satisfactorily employed or has acquired the judgment that steers her away from possible causes of self-destruction or deters her from the deed even in the face of what might have prompted her to act differently at an earlier age.

The ages at which male suicides far outnumber those of female, from 55 on, indicate that lack of health and the difficulty of making headway against the trials of failing business or lack of employment may be causes of self-destruction. The strength of both men and women begins to lessen at about 45 and it is to the credit of women that they have more courage to bear the onslaughts of nature than men have.

LONGER

From time to time questions are raised about the lengthening of the span of human life, and the Biblical ages are frequently brought forward to disprove the point that man's average life is longer now than at any time in records history.

It is certainly questionable whether the term "years" used in the Bible had the same significance that is now attached to it. A Biblical year probably was much shorter than the year of the present calendar.

Old records found in Egyptians' tombs indicate that the expectancy of life about 2000 years ago was only a little more than 30 years. The mortality rate among children and young adults was high. Among the Romans the expectancy of life was little better.

One of the first tables showing the expectancy of life was prepared by the astronomer Halley, best known for the comet bearing his name. Halley showed that the average span of life in the city of Breslau in 1691 was 33 years.

Today the average American lives 58 years.

Frank Severn has been kidnapped from his country home, Beggar's Court, apparently by persons trying to steal the fabulous and sinister Czarina Rubies. Severn's friend, Bill Wynter, enlists the help of Bill Grayson, a lawyer, and they search the grounds, discovering a secret stairway and a locked door in the GAL. 61 ruins of an ancient chapel. While they plan to force the door a wall collapses, burying it under tons of masonry. They suspect Martin, a servant of Severn's, of dynamiting the wall. They begin to doubt also the sincerity of Sant, Severn's attorney.

In a village nearby they meet an ex-convict, Ilsham, who goes on crutches. Also they encounter a mysterious Dr. Martell, whose presence Martin, the servant, tries for some reason to conceal.

Grayson's wife and Katharine Faring, to whom the rubies rightfully belong by inheritance from her Russian grandfather, return to London while the two men plan to search Beggar's Court again at night. Severn discovers Ilsham, his crutches laid aside, examining a motor boat in a boathouse. Almost at the same moment he is fired on from the darkness and drops to the ground to save his life.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XXXVI

But luck was with him. His groping hand touched the great exposed roots, still partly covered with the clinging earth out of which they had been torn. Jim Wynter felt several degrees happier as he slipped behind this cover.

And still no sign on his enemy's part. Jim had spent the last few moments thinking hard. The man who had dogged him was not far away, might even be nearer than he thought. The question was whether he was to wait for that figure in the shadow to take the initiative, or to take it himself.

Perhaps it was that uncertainty as to his now invisible quarry's movements that made this furtive gunman apparently so wary about showing himself in the open after those two shots had gone wide.

CONTEMPT

It might be that this specialist in treacherous murder, skulking in the dark, shooting from the dark, Jim told himself contemptuously, was out to run no risks himself. Was he apprehensive lest if he ventured out of cover the man he had stalked might seize advantage of the confusing obscurity in this grim game of blind man's bluff to spring out on him from some unsuspected hiding place, take him by surprise? Thought, it less risky to bide his time on the chance of getting in another shot?

Well, what if he could strike at a weak spot in this seemingly none too confident enemy's nerves?

A thought had suddenly flashed across Jim Wynter's mind with the remembrance of something in his pocket—something he had bought at Penhoit before he and Bill had motored back to Beggar's Court. Something he had planned to use tonight, though not in this way or to meet any such emergency of danger. A wonderful bit of luck that purchase! Thanks to it Jim saw a sudden chance of turning the tables—a sporting chance worth gambling on! And in those waiting moments of suspended hostilities he began to make his preparations swiftly and silently.

Was that a movement in the shadows? Jim's ears caught a faint rustle as of stealthy footsteps, as if his enemy was tired of watchful inaction. And simultaneously came a sound from the boathouse too. Above the faint lapping of the waters of the estuary against the bank he heard a sound as of some one stepping into a boat moored by the landing steps there.

The man calling himself John Ilsham, who had never been seen in the village without his crutches, must have been able to move very expeditiously without their help. Jim Wynter caught the sudden muffled splash of oars dipping into the water.

And then out of the darkness came a swift rush of feet toward the bank of the stream—and then Jim knew that he had two enemies, not one, to reckon with.

"He's got away by water—slipped through our hands, damn him," he heard a low voice mutter in furious chagrin not very far away.

So those unknown enemies of his—he could faintly make out the two shadowy figures as they raced to the bank to peer out into the dark of the estuary—imagined that the man now pulling out into midstream, to be carried along swiftly by the tide, was their intended quarry, Jim Wynter.

Though they were less than a dozen yards away, their features were still indistinguishable in the dim obscurity, though one of them impressed Jim with a sense of vague familiarity. He was pretty certain it was Martin—a fact that would not be in the least surprising.

Martin, who knew the secret behind that underground door was suspected.

It was the other silhouetted figure who lunged up an arm as if to fire after the escaping man they believed to be Wynter; then evidently thought better of the impulse.

"What does that interfering fool, Wynter, suspect, to bring him nosing about here? We've got to stop him, Frome, before he can find out anything to make him dangerous. He may even be dangerous now."

It was Martin's voice, and there was an ugly ring about the words that were just loud enough to reach the man about whom they were spoken.

And almost simultaneously there came faintly to Jim's ears the sound of a distant car. Was it Bill Grayson's car?

But whether Bill's car or not, a swift impulse had decided Jim Wynter that he was going to take an active hand in the game now, try out that sporting chance.

It might be a reckless impulse, since these men were under the impression that he had escaped by boat and he had only to lie low to be in no further danger. But his blood was up and with that sense of mounting passionate wrath against these men who had planned treacherous cold-blooded murder, Jim Wynter was in no mood to play for safety.

Martin he had already recognized; he was determined to see too who that second would-be killer was. Whatever the risk, he was ready to take it—it was worth taking! And the sheer unexpectedness, the very audacity of his plan should carry it through.

Besides, if Bill were in that near-by motor car—

"Now's the moment, Jimmy—now!"

In the darkness a little smile crept about his lips. But his eyes were not smiling. Dangerous eyes, they looked just then.

There was just the faintest scratch of a match, and then as if a vivid searchlight had lit up the wide

Sand Companies Fight County Assessments

The petitioner set forth that three years ago the defendant brought her daughter to the Myers home asking the petitioner to care and rear her child for her, but that last Sunday the mother took the child away from the custody of the petitioner without consent.

It was argued to the Court that evidence will be produced at the final hearing to show that the Keelersville Hotel is not the type of place for a home for the child and that the child's mother is a wholly unfit person to care and rear her daughter, and that she is unwilling to provide a proper home.

Consideration of improving the plant to meet the requirements of the recently installed three-phase generator was also taken up. All of the wiring in Perkashie has been done to receive current supplied by a two-phase generator, that the three-phase machine replaced. All motors in the factories and plants about Perkashie will have to be rewired at considerable expense, or the current at the plant will have to be dropped down. A representative of the light plant will be sent to Philadelphia to investigate the most economical method of meeting the problem. It was announced that the borough, which supplies the current to surrounding factories, will have to meet the expense of dollars. If it is decided to rewire the motors.

A request was granted by council to the prospective silk company which is expected to locate in Perkashie to be exempt from taxes during 1932. The request was complied with on condition that the company rent or purchase a building and begin operations as soon as possible.

Joan Lowell's Prayer For Action Answered

Imagination that made me think the storm was laughing at me—I prayed for action and I was getting it. A radio message brought sinister news:

"Trawler Boston College, disabled on Georges Banks, broken crank shaft."

"How far are we from her now, Captain?" I asked when he told me the news.

"About one hundred and twenty miles—with a head sea to buck. We can reach her by daybreak," he answered. "I've radioed we are coming to her assistance."

I bundled up in warm clothing and went on deck to stand watch.

Alone I paced the quarterdeck—the roar of wind and waves broken only at intervals by the sailor on lookout—intoning his observations to the officer on the bridge.

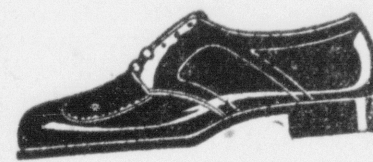

Gruesome thoughts pursued me there on the deck with the night for company—and the knowledge that somewhere beyond the black of the horizon men and a ship were in danger—fishermen who had toiled with back-breaking effort at their nets for food—in their hour of travail calling for succor from the Coast Guard—confident their call would not be in vain.

In the Dead Man's Watch, which is from 12 midnight until 4, I saw lights of other trawlers on the banks—first they would gleam brightly and then disappear behind a swell—pendulums of lights which ticked off word that there were living ships industrious at their trade—carrying on—while one of their fleet lay crippled and helpless somewhere miles away.

It is not sentiment which prompted a salute in my heart to a Coast Guard—for they will not fail a man or ship that asks for aid.

12 GOOD REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD USE KOPPERS COKE

For Heating Your Home

- 1. More Heat—
No matter how cold the weather, Koppers Coke will give you heat and plenty of it.
- 2. Quicker Heat—
A touch of the damper
- 3. Steadier Heat—
starts it. No waiting. No coaxing. Heat comes fast. It's nice, steady heat, too. Heat that keeps every nook and corner warm as toast all day.
- 4. Costs Less To Buy--
Even though it gives better results, Koppers Coke costs you much less than the solid fuels you burned before.
- 5. Costs Less To Burn--
It's more economical to burn, too. Altogether you will save at least two dollars out of every ten you used to spend.
- 6. Fewer Ashes—
You'll be surprised how little waste this improved fuel gives. A little pail holds all the ashes the average family gets in a week.
- 7. Less Shoveling—
Because it gives less waste, Koppers Coke eliminates most of the shoveling, shoveling and carrying out of ashes. Furnace tending is made simple and easy.
- 8. Saves Your Furnace
Fuels that give a lot of ash fill up the ash pit and shut out the air. Thus rates are damaged. Koppers Coke has so little ash that this danger is practically eliminated. It's so easy to keep the ash pit clean. Use Coke and your furnace will give you better results than ever before.
- 9. More Carbon—
It's the carbon in fuel that gives heat. And Koppers Coke is almost all carbon. That's why you get more heat for your money.
- 10. Less Fuel—
Because it gives so much better heat, you'll burn less of Koppers Coke. Thus you save money in two ways—less fuel at less cost.
- 11. Easy To Handle—
Koppers Coke is so much lighter—so much easier to handle. A child can take care of it.
- 12. No Soot—
No smoke or soot. Koppers Coke is a clean-burning fuel.

TWO high geared, fast scoring football machines will test engines at New York City's Yankee Stadium this Saturday when Georgia, Yale's nemesis, meets N. Y. U. Two sections of the country... each confident that its brand of football is superior... will be represented. Two basic systems of play will be pitted against each other by teams which have demonstrated time and again their efficiency in interpreting those systems. These Crackers adhere strictly to all the Rockne principles, while the Violets are able exponents of a Meehan-modified Warner system.

Last Fall, N. Y. U. defeated the Southerners, 7-6, after the latter had earned a convincing 18-14 victory over their big brother Bulldogs from New Haven. Early this season, the Georgians marched through the Yale Bowl again, this time to a most decisive 26-7 triumph. How Coach Harry Mehre's boys roared through old Eli's ranks with the zip of their rebel yell that day!

Of course, some critics say that, when the Georgians desecrated the sacred sod of the Yale Bowl recently, they appeared to be a collection of eleven individual stars. Indeed, many staunch supporters of the Blue were convinced that there were even more than eleven Dixie bulldogs in action on given plays, but the referee didn't see them!

N. Y. U. has the most impressive early season team Chick Meehan has turned out there to date. It is so well balanced that stars like McNamara in the backfield and Concannon in the line are likely to find, at any time and in any game, two or three or all of their teammates stealing all their thunder.

One thing certain is that both master minds—Meehan and Mehre—will watch their boys get set for the opening kick-off with every confidence that a gridiron version of the high spots in the Civil War is about to be presented. Most fans have similar expectations.
